NCHA WINTER MEETING 2020

February 20-21 • Raleigh Marriott Crabtree Valley

NCHA Winter Meeting 2020

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

Plan to join us for NCHA's 2020 Winter Membership Meeting where we will welcome in a new decade together and think about how, together, we lay the foundation for an amazing future.

Like in the "Roaring Twenties," where our country saw rapid industrial and economic growth, accelerated consumer demand, and the introduction of new changes in lifestyle and culture, we are poised to see significant changes over the next decade. We have the opportunity to shape those changes. For too long, changes in healthcare have been happening to us. Our conference agenda aims to give you the tools to lead, build support and create real change that improves the health of our communities.

This year we're taking an "all-hands-on-deck" approach and inviting hospital and health system trustees to attend. We've created a new morning session to get your board members, who are trusted local leaders, involved and active in advocacy. Building relationships, influence, reputation and trust are key topics on the first day's agenda. The McCauley Keynote Lecturer, Ian Morrison, will look into his crystal ball and offer a forecast of the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead.

On Friday, we'll provide an overview of the 2020 election and cover the impact of unconscious bias in healthcare. We'll conclude the day with our closing speaker Dr. Natalie Stavas, who will inspire us to "run towards chaos" – because doing so actually makes it more manageable.

I look forward to seeing you and encourage your leadership team and trustees to learn and network with us. Come early for panel sessions on the afternoon of February 19, hosted by the American College of Healthcare Executives.

Sincerely,

Steve Lawler
NCHA President & CEO

Managing Your Hospital's Reputation

Steven Behm, Regional President, Edelman

Hospitals and health systems have a lot on their plate. From navigating an ever-changing healthcare landscape to juggling the ins and outs of a complex payor system, a hospital's reputation plays a critical role in its ability to attract patients, physicians and credibly serve the health needs of its community. As the digital communications world continues to expand, so does the risk of reputational mismanagement. In this session, Steve Behm will share consumer insights guiding patients and employees towards their health and employment choices. From these insights, you will hear how to evolve, protect and promote your hospitals and health systems. Behm is a recognized industry expert in crisis and risk management. Previously, he worked in government and political campaigns for more than a decade, then in a specialized public affairs firm that helped clients with legislative and regulatory challenges. He has been a contributor to CNN, The Washington Journal and Business Week.

The State of Trust in Healthcare: How Do We Measure Up?

Steven Behm, Regional President, Edelman

In recent years, Edelman's Trust Barometer research has shown that as the role health policy plays in our lives and society has expanded, people's expectations for healthcare, at large, have evolved. Now more than ever, hospitals and health systems must provide a reliable product and a rewarding patient experience. But now patients and employees have many more reasons to question how much they trust their health systems. Will it protect their data and privacy? Use information responsibly? Tell the truth in this era of disinformation? In short: Can the people we serve trust that we are doing the right thing? Join Steve Behm as he presents the newest Trust Barometer report on Healthcare in America.

We See What We Believe: The True Cost of Unconscious Bias

Gloria Goins, Chief Diversity / Inclusion Officer, Bon Secours Health System

The outcomes of unconscious bias can be seen across all industries. But, in the health care industry, the need to mitigate it is of particular importance. Evidenced-based impacts of unconscious bias on safety, quality, and mortality show that we are unintentionally putting our patients at risk. Cross cultural competency is a “must have” skill as we define what it means to address, support and manage the ever-changing population. In this session, we will discuss actual strategies to address the effects of unconscious bias that are underway at Bon Secours Health System, the nation’s 25th largest healthcare system. Learn practical actions that can reduce the effects of unconscious bias in your overall operations. Goins, Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer for Bon Secours, is responsible for leveraging diversity, inclusion and cross-cultural competency to advance the organization’s mission and business objectives. Becker’s Hospital Review recognized her as one of the Top 10 chief diversity officers in healthcare.

Running Toward Chaos

Natalie Stavas, Physician, Boston Marathon Runner

Natalie Stavas, MD, was born on a farm in Nebraska. She was once told that people from Nebraska don’t do well in places like Boston. She proved them wrong. Dr. Stavas was the first person from Nebraska to be accepted into the Harvard Pediatric Training program at Boston Children’s Hospital. One year after moving to Boston she received the Boston Foundation’s Change Maker award and in 2013 she received the Bostonian of the Year Award. This award is given to Bostonians who impact their community in a remarkable way. An avid runner, Dr. Stavas’ philosophy for success is . . . “You Run Towards.” This philosophy was never more apparent than on April 15, 2013. She had just run 26 miles and was about to finish the Boston Marathon when bombs detonated at the finish line. Instead of turning around and running away with the crowd, she ran towards the chaos and saved four lives that day. She has been honored by President Obama, as well as featured on CNN, BBC, CBC, and Fox news. She has also appeared on the cover of Runner’s World Magazine and Sports Illustrated.
